- Victor Rosenblum* 235 The central panel system: enhancing administrative justice
- L. Harold Levinson* 236 The central panel system: a framework that separates ALJs from administrative agencies
By creating central panels of ALJs separate from administrative agencies, eight states have found a way to emphasize the independence of these judges.
- Malcolm Rich* 246 Adapting the central panel system: a study of seven states
Although each of the seven existing central panel systems achieves the basic goal of separating ALJs from the agencies they serve, each does so in a different way.
- Duane R. Harves* 257 Making administrative proceedings more efficient and effective: how the ALJ central panel system works in Minnesota
Since its creation in 1975, the Minnesota central panel system has helped reduce dramatically both the cost of administrative adjudication and case processing time.
- Jeffrey S. Lubbers* 266 A unified corps of ALJs: a proposal to test the idea at the federal level
The increasing importance of ALJs in the federal administrative process raises new concerns about their independence. Perhaps the answer is a central panel system that separates them from the agencies they serve.
