The Authority to Make Treaties in the Late Middle Ages
Theodor Meron	1
Professor Meron here explores the medieval sources of the modern law of treaties, particularly in relation to the authority to conclude treaties transferring aspects of national sovereignty. He shows that one's understanding of modern treaty questions can be deepened by understanding arguments made five centuries ago.
The Korean War: On What Legal Basis Did Truman Act?
Louis Fisher	21
This article reviews President Truman's unilateral commitment of troops to Korea in 1950 and concludes that Truman acted in violation of the Constitution and the UN Participation Act of 1945. Relying on Security Council resolutions is not a legal precedent for contemporary Presidents, including Bush and Clinton, to circumvent the need for congressional approval.
